Our Monthly Features

This month the language sub-editors have assembled academically stimulating contributions which include an introspective lens into the Hmong people of French Guyana from our French and Martinican Creole writer, a critical piece on The University and national awareness in the English-speaking Caribbean by the Spanish contributor, an insightful enquiry into the female body and dance in Sint Maarten from the Dutch language sub-editor and an excursion into an Aruban Parang Song by the Papiamento columnist. In a landmark contribution, The Virgin Islands correspondent invites us to innovate perspectives beyond colonial history and cultural narratives.

Stop by and read their contributions!

Special features

This month's Game Changer is Safiya Olugbala who was always conscious of the remarkable role of education and its ability to create an evolved reality that could extract an oppressed people from that room. Born to a black militant father and a resourceful Alkebulan queen in the backwoods of South Trinidad, Safiya's classroom was constructed out of a nineteenth century progressive model. Her parents, particularly her father, surrounded her with some of the finest minds since the imposed invisibility of Egypt and the Nile Valley Civilization. Books and stories were her teachers and the wellspring of knowledge they provided led to grand imaginings that haunted her childhood and directed her path into adulthood.

Check out the Game Changer segment and see how Safiya has been able to transform lives through the lessons learnt from her life story.

MESSAGE FROM THE EDITOR cont'd

Our January Caribbean Artistic Scholar is Shanice Gonzales. Shanice's work explores gender-based issues. She uses "deceptively soft and light pieces" to deconstruct violence faced by women and children in our societies with a focus on the objectification and commodification of women's bodies, and the role of the media in this process. Through visual re-presentations, Shanice creates awareness by exploring the 'why' factor and probing "the things that are hardest to talk about, but in a delicate, and beautiful way." Her artistic inspiration comes from her own journey of self-discovery—a confrontation of self. And more importantly, from her mother's battle with her own past and the traumas of that past. The stories of Shanice's mother not only serve as inspiration and motivation for the current work, but also bring about the transformation of silence into a language of action.

We focus on Antonio Carmona Baez in our Member Highlight segment this month. Dr. Antonio Carmona Báez was co-director of the IIRE, 2008-2009, and was appointed as an IIRE Fellow in 2011. He holds degrees in International Relations and International Political Economy from the University of Amsterdam, in The Netherlands. He started his career as a scholar-activist in 2001 at the Transnational Institute, where he served as communications officer and researcher. He is author of State Resistance to Globalisation in Cuba (Pluto, 2004) and published several articles concerning the global justice movement, Caribbean political economy and the condition of labour. He is also a contributor to Living our Internationalism, the history of the IIRE.

New Book

Professor Barbara Lalla is the featured author in our new book section. Her work is entitled Grounds for Tenure and has been described in the following manner. "Alongside the lighter side of college life, Grounds for Tenure discloses the diverse cravings of the ultra smart and unexpectedly foolish, as well as self-absorption and bottomless generosity. This tale of inner and outer landscapes marks a new departure in Caribbean fiction. Humorous, critical and compassionate, the novel turns a keen gaze at habitats for rising intellectuals in the Caribbean world of letters."

De nosotros a usted!

Este mes destacamos los detalles críticamente importantes para que cada miembro tome nota cuando comienzan a planificar para nuestra conferencia de junio en La Habana, Cuba. Recordatorio: consulte los siguientes enlaces para obtener más información sobre la membresía y la inscripción en la conferencia:

Enlace de membresía: <https://www.eventsforce.net/csa/8/home>

Enlace de registro: <https://www.eventsforce.net/csa/7/home>

Nuestras características mensuales

Este mes los subeditores de idiomas han reunido contribuciones académicamente estimulantes que incluyen una visión introspectiva de la gente hmong de la Guyana francesa de nuestro escritor criollo francés y martiniqueno, una pieza crítica sobre la Universidad y la conciencia nacional en el Caribe de habla inglesa por parte de los españoles colaborador, una perspicaz investigación sobre el cuerpo femenino y la danza en Sint Maarten del subeditor de lengua holandesa y una excursión a una canción Parang de Aruban realizada por el columnista de Papiamento. En una contribución histórica, el corresponsal de The Virgin Islands nos invita a innovar perspectivas más allá de la historia colonial y las narrativas culturales.

Pase y lea sus contribuciones!

Características especiales

El Game Changer de este mes es Safiya Olugbala, que siempre fue consciente del notable papel de la educación y su capacidad para crear una realidad evolucionada que podría extraer a las personas oprimidas de esa habitación. Nacido de un padre militante negro y una ingeniosa reina de Alkebulan en los bosques del sur de Trinidad, el aula de Safiya se construyó a partir de un modelo progresivo del siglo XIX. Sus padres, particularmente su padre, la rodearon con algunas de las mejores mentes desde la invisibilidad impuesta de Egipto y la Civilización del Valle del Nilo. Los libros y las historias fueron sus maestros y la fuente de conocimiento que proporcionaron llevó a grandes fantasías que atormentaron su infancia y dirigieron su camino hacia la edad adulta.

Echa un vistazo al segmento Game Changer y observa cómo Safiya ha sido capaz de transformar vidas a través de las lecciones aprendidas de la historia de su vida.

Nuestra becaria artística caribeña de enero es Shanice Gonzales. El trabajo de Shanice explora cuestiones de género. Utiliza "piezas engañosamente suaves y livianas" para deconstruir la violencia que enfrentan las mujeres y los niños en nuestras sociedades con un enfoque en la objetivación y mercantilización de los cuerpos de las mujeres, y el papel de los medios en este proceso. A través de representaciones visuales, Shanice crea conciencia explorando el factor "por qué" y explorando "las cosas más difíciles de hablar, pero de una manera delicada y hermosa". Su inspiración artística proviene de su propio viaje de autodescubrimiento. Una confrontación de uno mismo Y más importante, desde la batalla de su madre con su propio pasado y los traumas de ese pasado. Las historias de la madre de Shanice no solo sirven de inspiración y motivación para el trabajo actual, sino que también provocan la transformación del silencio en un lenguaje de acción.

Nos enfocamos en Antonio Carmona Baez en nuestro segmento Highlight Member este mes. El Dr. Antonio Carmona Báez fue codirector del IIRE, 2008-2009, y fue nombrado miembro del IIRE en 2011. Es licenciado en Relaciones Internacionales y Economía Política Internacional por la Universidad de Ámsterdam, en los Países Bajos. Comenzó su carrera como erudito-activista en 2001 en el Transnational Institute, donde se desempeñó como oficial de comunicaciones e investigador. Es autor de Resistencia Estatal a la Globalización en Cuba (Plutón, 2004) y publicó varios artículos sobre el movimiento global de justicia, la economía política del Caribe y la condición del trabajo. También es colaborador de Living our Internationalism, la historia del IIRE.

Nuevo libro

La profesora Barbara Lalla es la autora destacada en nuestra nueva sección de libros. Su trabajo se titula Motivos para la tenencia y ha sido descrito de la siguiente manera. "Junto con el lado más liviano de la vida universitaria, Grounds for Tenure revela los diversos anhelos de la generosidad ultra inteligente e inesperadamente tonta, así como de la autoabsorción y la generosidad sin fondo. Esta historia de paisajes interiores y exteriores marca una nueva partida en la ficción caribeña. Humorística, crítica y compasiva, la novela dirige una aguda mirada a los hábitats de los crecientes intelectuales del mundo caribeño de las letras".

Nos caractéristiques mensuelles

Ce mois-ci, les sous-éditeurs ont rassemblé des contributions académiques stimulantes qui incluent un regard introspectif sur le peuple hmong de la Guyane française de la part de notre écrivain créole français et martiniquais, un article critique sur l'Université et la conscience nationale dans les Caraïbes anglophones. contributeur, une enquête perspicace sur le corps féminin et la danse à Sint Maarten du sous-éditeur de langue néerlandaise et une excursion dans un Aruban Parang Song par le chroniqueur papiamento. Dans une contribution historique, le correspondant des îles Vierges nous invite à innover des perspectives au-delà de l'histoire coloniale et des récits culturels.

Arrêtez-vous et lisez leurs contributions!

Particularités

Le Game Changer de ce mois-ci est Safiya Olugbala qui a toujours été consciente du rôle remarquable de l'éducation et de sa capacité à créer une réalité évoluée capable d'extraire un peuple opprimé de cette pièce. Née d'un père militant noir et d'une reine alchimiste pleine de ressources dans les bois de South Trinidad, la classe de Safiya a été construite à partir d'un modèle progressif du XIXe siècle. Ses parents, en particulier son père, l'entouraient de certains des meilleurs esprits depuis l'invisibilité imposée de l'Égypte et de la civilisation de la vallée du Nil. Les livres et les histoires étaient ses professeurs et la source de connaissances qu'ils ont fourni a conduit à de grandes imaginations qui ont hanté son enfance et ont dirigé son chemin vers l'âge adulte.

Découvrez le segment Game Changer et découvrez comment Safiya a pu transformer des vies grâce aux leçons tirées de son histoire de vie.

Notre boursier artistique des Caraïbes de janvier est Shanice Gonzales. Le travail de Shanice explore les questions liées au genre. Elle utilise des «pièces faussement douces et légères» pour déconstruire la violence à laquelle sont confrontées les femmes et les enfants dans nos sociétés en mettant l'accent sur l'objectivation et la marchandisation du corps des femmes et le rôle des médias dans ce processus. À travers des re-présentations visuelles, Shanice crée une conscience en explorant le facteur «pourquoi» et en sondant «les choses les plus difficiles à aborder, mais d'une manière délicate et belle». Son inspiration artistique provient de son propre voyage de découverte de soi. -une confrontation de soi. Et plus important encore, de la bataille de sa mère avec son propre passé et les traumatismes de ce passé. Les histoires de la mère de Shanice ne servent pas seulement d'inspiration et de motivation pour le travail en cours, mais provoquent aussi la transformation du silence en un langage d'action.

Nous nous concentrons sur Antonio Carmona Baez dans notre segment Highlight Member ce mois-ci. Antonio Carmona Baez a été co-directeur de l'IIRF en 2008-2009 et a été nommé boursier de l'IIRF en 2011. Il est diplômé en relations internationales et en économie politique internationale de l'Université d'Amsterdam, aux Pays-Bas. Il a débuté sa carrière en 2001 comme chercheur à l'Institut Transnational, où il a été agent de communication et chercheur. Il est l'auteur de La résistance de l'État à la mondialisation à Cuba (Pluton, 2004) et a publié plusieurs articles concernant le mouvement pour la justice mondiale, l'économie politique des Caraïbes et la condition du travail. Il est également un contributeur à Living our Internationalism, l'histoire de l'IIRF.

Nouveau livre

Professeur Barbara Lalla est l'auteur vedette dans notre nouvelle section de livre. Son travail est intitulé Grounds for Tenure et a été décrit de la manière suivante. "En plus du côté plus léger de la vie collégiale, Grounds for Tenure révèle les diverses envies de l'ultra intelligent et imprévisible stupide, ainsi que l'auto-absorption et la générosité sans fond. Ce conte des paysages intérieurs et extérieurs marque un nouveau départ dans la fiction caribéenne. Humoristique, critique et compatisant, le roman jette un regard attentif sur les habitats pour les intellectuels émergents dans le monde des lettres des Caraïbes."

Comme nombre d'entre vous le savent, que ce soit par la publication sur le site web ou sur les réseaux sociaux, la date limite d'envoi des propositions en vue de notre rendez-vous à la Havane a été prolongé au 31 janvier. LES HMONGS EN GUYANE FRANÇAISE

La situation socio-politique du Cambodge, du Laos et du Vietnam était très instable pendant longtemps à cause des guerres d'Indochine (1946-1954) et du Vietnam (1955-1975) qui ont affecté cette région durant plusieurs années. La Guyane française, un Département français d'Outre-Mer, ont accueilli un nombre important de Hmongs qui sont originaires du Laos et du Nord du Vietnam. Ils cherchaient à se réfugier en Europe et aux Etats-Unis puisque beaucoup d'entre eux se sont tenus auprès des Français pour combattre les Communistes. Leur vie étant en danger, ils ont été contraints de fuir leur pays pour aller en Thaïlande.

Cependant, le Haut-Commissariat des Nations Unies aux Droits de l'Homme est intervenu pour les protéger et leur accorder le statut de réfugiés. La France et les Etats-Unis leur ont ouvert leurs portes. Alors que la plupart d'entre eux se sont réfugiés aux Etats-Unis, 10 000 personnes sont allées en Guyane française. Les autorités françaises ont vu que la Guyane française notamment le village de Cacao se prêtait bien à la vie des Hmongs et que ceux-ci pourraient contribuer beaucoup à l'économie locale. Il faut souligner la présence des Hmongs dans d'autres villages tels que Javoulnay et Réjina. Selon Clarkin (2007, 9), c'est le village de Javoulnay qui compte le plus d'immigrés Hmongs.

L'agriculture occupe autant d'importance que l'école dans la vie des Hmongs. Même les instituteurs et les propriétaires de restaurant font de l'agriculture sur leur lopin de terre. A Cacao, les jeunes vont à l'école. Ce n'est pas le cas à Réjina où ils travaillent dans les champs. Il n'y a pas d'eau courante à Réjina de sorte que les gens prennent l'eau de pluie ou vont chercher de l'eau rivière. Cette eau bien est traitée. A Cacao, les écoles sont fermées le mercredi et les enfants vont aider leurs parents à préparer les fruits et les légumes pour le marché du samedi.

Les Hmong sont encore attachés à leur culture. Le travail de recherche qu'a effectué Clarkin (2007) montre bien que les hommes de l'ancienne génération portent encore leurs pantalons larges et leurs chemises noires à manches longues. Par contre, les femmes mettent leurs sarong style laotien et leurs bottes en caoutchouc pour se protéger contre les piqûres d'insectes et les morsures de serpents venimeux. Les jeunes générations optent pour le style occidental bien qu'elles s'habillent en tenues traditionnelles lors des grandes occasions telles que mariages, événements politiques et fêtes du nouvel an. Aujourd'hui, certains mariages traditionnels ont encore lieu dans la communauté Hmong. La plupart des Hmongs sont Chrétiens. Ils fréquentent les églises catholiques ou protestantes.

Les Hmongs ont conservé leur langue maternelle qui est le Hmong. Les enfants communiquent avec leur parents en Hmong. Mais lorsqu'il faut vendre les produits au marché, les Hmongs s'expriment soit en créole ou en français. D'après Chô Li (2014, 162), il existe deux types de langues Hmongs (Hmong blanc et Hmong vert) qui sont relativement proches l'une de l'autre à part quelques différences dans la phonétique.

THE HMONG PEOPLE IN FRENCH GUYANA

The socio-political situation in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam was very unstable for a long period due to the Indochina (1946-1954) and Vietnam Wars (1955-1975) that plagued this region for so many years. French Guyana, a French Overseas Department, hosted a large number of Hmong people who originated from Laos and Vietnam. They were seeking refuge in Europe and the United States since many of them fought with the French against the Communists. However, their lives were at stake and they were compelled to leave their country for Thailand.

But the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights intervened to protect them and granted the refugee status. Both France and the United States of America opened their doors to them. But, the majority went to the States while 10,000 of them went to French Guyana. The French authorities saw French Guyana as a place where the Hmong people could settle and develop agriculture in a village called Cacao. It is common to see Hmong living in other village known as Javoulney.

According to Clarkin (2005, 27), other villages such as Javoulney and Regina have become the home of Hmong as well. However, out of all three villages, Javoulney has the highest number of Hmong immigrants. While there is current water in both Cacao and Javoulney, there is hardly any in Régina. Hmong families collect water from rainfall and streams. The water is treated for consumption. Farming is as important as acquiring education for many Hmong families. Both teachers and restaurants own a piece of land where they grow their fruits and vegetables. In Cacao, most of the children go to school while many of them work in the fields in the village of Régina. Schools are closed in the Cacao village and children must help their parents prepare for the market.

Hmongs are still attached to their culture and traditions. The men of the older generations wear their traditional clothes: baggy bags and long sleeved black shirts. On the other hand, the women are dressed in the Lao sarong and wear rubber boots to shield themselves from both insect and poisonous snakes' bites. The younger generations tend to prefer the Western style although they wear their traditional clothes on specific occasions such as weddings, political events and New Year's festivals. Even today, traditional weddings are still taking place in Hmong communities. They go Catholic and Protestant churches. Hmongs have preserved their mother tongue Hmong. Children and parents interact with each other using the Hmong language. However, when it comes to selling their products in the market, Hmongs express themselves either in French Guyanese Creole or in French. There are two varieties of Hmong languages that are known as Hmong Green and Hmong White. They are related in spite of their phonological differences.

Universidad y conciencia nacional en el Caribe inglés

El Colegio Universitario fundado en el Campus Mona, Jamaica, en 1948, constituyó el germen de una institución que logró, en plena etapa descolonizadora, estructurar criterios históricos que marcaron -definitivamente- el cambio. Al recibir su estatus como universidad independiente en 1962, desarrolló los principales lineamientos de la nueva historia. El objetivo: describir y analizar las sociedades, particularmente la sociedad esclavista, atendiendo a las diferencias en cuanto a temporalidad de la plantación, la demografía regional y los procesos socio-económicos y políticos del Caribe.

La nueva historia del Caribe se inició con las conferencias ofrecidas por Shirley Gordon y Roy Augier entre 1953 y 1958, las cuales fueron compiladas en dos materiales titulados "Sources of West Indian History" y "The Making of the West Indies". Hasta el presente constituyen un punto de partida historiográfico, que halló en el año 1968, su publicación sistemática dedicada a una historia renovada: Caribbean Quarterly (<http://www.uwi.edu/cq/default.aspx>); su legado cultural, la polémica en torno al significado de "ser caribeño", que no sólo era resultante de un pasado, sino la vía por la cual escritores y creadores artísticos observaban y cuestionaban la posible existencia o no de la caribeñidad. En sus números Rex Netherford, editor-jefe nos propuso estudiar nuestra realidad de manera ecléctica, aportando algo que hasta este momento, según el propio editor no se había podido convertir en palabra escrita. Esta caribeñidad es lo simbólico en el aspecto identitario de nuestra historia caribeña (Editorial, Caribbean Quarterly, v.17, n. 1-2, 1971).

Otras publicaciones de dicha institución contribuyeron al pensamiento económico-social del Caribe. The Journal of the Caribbean History sistematizó el movimiento migratorio posterior a la abolición, los cambios socio-demográficos relacionados con la industria azucarera en el último cuarto del siglo XIX, el proceso de aprendizaje y el desarrollo de la política educacional entre 1838 y 1870.

De igual manera, Social and Economics Studies abordó la sociedad post-abolicionista. Es el referente obligado para el estudio de la Integración Caribeña. A través de sus números podemos conocer el complejo periodo histórico de 1953 a 1970 para conocer los factores determinantes en la desintegración de la Federación de las Indias Occidentales, la perpetuación de ciertas actitudes y valores formados por la existencia de un largo período de esclavitud y dominación colonial y la publicación del artículo "Mental Ability in Jamaica", de D. R. Manley, trabajo pionero para los estudios del pensamiento social caribeño.

La UWI acotó -en un espacio intelectual- el movimiento descolonizador y la conciencia nacional. El conjunto de ideas, acciones e intereses expresados en el Caribe inglés -desde los años 30- encontraron en las instalaciones de esta digna institución sus mejores interlocutores, que luego llevaron a cabo grandes procesos transformadores y revolucionarios en el Caribe contemporáneo.

Las perspectivas de desarrollo económico, social y político desde la región es un reto constante para la institución. La mayoría de los ministros, premios Nobel y gobernadores son figuras vinculadas a la labor académica desde la UWI. Con esta sencilla nota mensual, elogiamos los ochenta años de la Universidad de las Indias Occidentales.

80 años de desarrollo intelectual en el Caribe.
Celebremos la UWI.

University and national awareness in the English Caribbean

The University College founded on Campus Mona, Jamaica, in 1948, was the seed of an institution that managed, in the middle of the decolonization stage, to structure historical criteria that marked - definitively- the change. Upon receiving his status as an independent university in 1962, he developed the main guidelines of the new history. The objective: to describe and analyze societies, particularly the slave society, attending to the differences in temporality of the plantation, the regional demography and the socio-economic and political processes of the Caribbean.

The new history of the Caribbean began with the lectures offered by Shirley Gordon and Roy Augier between 1953 and 1958, which were compiled in two materials entitled "Sources of West Indian History" and "The Making of the West Indies." Up to the present they constitute a historiographic starting point, which he found in 1968, his systematic publication dedicated to a renewed history: Caribbean Quarterly (<http://www.uwi.edu/cq/default.aspx>); its cultural legacy, the controversy surrounding the meaning of "being Caribbean", which was not only the result of a past, but the way in which writers and artistic creators observed and questioned the possible existence or not of the Caribbean. In his numbers Rex Netherford, editor-in-chief proposed us to study our reality in an eclectic way, contributing something that until now, according to the editor, could not have been converted into a written word. This caribeñidad is symbolic in the aspect of identity of our Caribbean history (Editorial, Caribbean Quarterly, v.17, n.2-1, 1971).

Other publications of this institution contributed to the economic-social thinking of the Caribbean. The Journal of the Caribbean History systematized the migratory movement after the abolition, the socio-demographic changes related to the sugar industry in the last quarter of the 19th century, the learning process and the development of educational policy between 1838 and 1870.

Similarly, Social and Economics Studies addressed the post-abolitionist society. It is the obligatory reference for the study of Caribbean Integration. Through their numbers we can know the complex historical period from 1953 to 1970 to know the determining factors in the disintegration of the Federation of the West Indies, the perpetuation of certain attitudes and values formed by the existence of a long period of slavery and domination colonial and the publication of the article "Mental Ability in Jamaica", by DR Manley, pioneering work for studies of Caribbean social thought. The UWI marked -in an intellectual space- the decolonizing movement and the national consciousness. The set of ideas, actions and interests expressed in the English Caribbean -from the 1930s- found in the facilities of this worthy institution its best interlocutors, who then carried out great transformative and revolutionary processes in the contemporary Caribbean.

The perspectives of economic, social and political development from the region is a constant challenge for the institution. The majority of the ministers, Nobel prizes and governors are figures linked to the academic work from the UWI. With this simple monthly note, we commend the eighty years of the University of the West Indies.

Twerken

'Work, work, work, work, work...' Daisy en Dane zingen het zachtjes maar duidelijk verstaanbaar: 'You see me I be work, work, work, work, work'. De docent reageert geïrriteerd: 'You don't know what is work!' Maar de leerlingen zijn het daar niet mee eens: 'Yes teacher, we know!' De docent vraagt daarom: 'how old this song is?' Een levendige discussie ontspant zich: twee weken? Drie? Misschien twee en een half teacher! Met fonkelende ogen antwoordt de docent: 'I just wanted to make a point that you do know this. But the work I give you, you can never remember!' Zoals wel vaker wanneer hij op metaniveau over de leerlingen spreekt kijkt hij mij veelzeggend aan. Ik glimlach.

Later, als de docent weg is, staan de twee voor het krijtbord en zingen wederom: 'work, work, work, work, work.' Nu zingen ze niet alleen het liedje van Rihanna maar dansen ze ook zoals zij dat kan¹. Hun bewegingen wijzen mij op een belangrijke wijziging in de woorden die ze zingen. Ze zingen 'twerk, twerk, twerk, twerk, twerk' en hun bekken beweegt ritmisch van voor naar achter. Andere leerlingen dansen mee: jongens en meisjes, grote bil of kleine bil, iedereen twerkt.

Een levendige discussie over vrouwelijke lichamen, sexy dansen en toe-eigening ontspon zich nadat Miley Cyrus live op het podium twerde tijdens de MTV awards in 2013. Ineens was twerken een 'trending topic'. Een enkeling was trots dat 'haar' dans ineens geaccepteerd werd, terwijl anderen het gevoel hadden dat hun cultuur hen werd ontnomen en dat haar originele betekenis werd vervaagd. Lucille Toth legt uit dat twerken Afrikaans invloeden kent, maar als dansvorm, ontstaan in de New Orleans projects, vooral begrepen moet worden als 'urban terrorism that forces people to witness the ways in which woman reclaim public spaces through the motion of their bodies' (2017: 293). Daarnaast bevraagt twerking westerse schoonheidsidealen en de relatie tussen sterke, slanke lichamen en kapitalistische /imperialistische uitbuiting.

Hebben we iets aan Toth haar analyse in de klas op Sint Maarten? Op het eerste gezicht lijken Daisy en Dane hun favoriete muziek en dans van de televisie te imiteren. Maar waarom kiezen ze om daar en dan te twerken? Als we populaire cultuur begrijpen in de termen van Stuart Hall is het twerken een vorm van verzet tegen de heersende macht: de docent. Hij dwingt de leerlingen wiskunde te doen, iets waaraan ze weinig plezier beleven. Ook zullen veel van hen weinig hebben aan het kunnen berekenen en benoemen van verschillende hoeken. Dus in plaats van werken, kiezen de leerlingen voor twerken. Of misschien is het twerken wel het echt werk. Want hiermee dwingen ze mij, en degene die het curriculum maken, om na te denken over de lessen die gedoceerd worden en de manieren waarop dit gebeurd. Is onderwijs een fabriek die passieve arbeiders produceert? Of kan onderwijs bijdragen aan het ontwikkelen van die kritische en creatieve volwassenen die Sint Maarten en de wereld zo hard nodig hebben.

Do the twerk

'Work, work, work, work, work...' Daisy and Dane sing it softly, but unmistakably. 'You see me I be work, work, work, work, work'. Their teacher responds irritated: 'You don't know what is work!' The pupils do not agree: 'Yes teacher, we know!' The teacher questions them: 'how old this song is?' he asks. A lively discussion erupts amongst the pupils: 'two weeks? No, three weeks. Maybe two and a half teacher!' With a twinkle in his eyes the teacher says: 'I just wanted to make a point that you do know this. But the work I give you, you can never remember!' He looks at me, as he often does when he speaks on a meta-level about the lack of work-ethic of his pupils. I smile.

Later, when the teacher has left the room, the two are standing in front of the chalkboard and sing again: 'Work, work, work, work, work'. This time they do not only sing Rihanna's song but also dance the way she can². With their movements they alert me to an alteration they make in the text. What they are singing is: 'twerk, twerk, twerk, twerk, twerk'. They move their pelvis front and back rhythmically. Soon, other pupils join: boys and girls, big butts and small butts. Everybody twerks.

A lively discussion about female bodies, sexy dancing, and cultural appropriation ensued from Miley Cyrus' performance at the MTV awards in 2013, where she twerked live on stage. Twerking was suddenly a trending topic. Some were proud of 'their' dance becoming mainstream, while others felt their culture had been taken from them and stripped of its original meaning. Lucille Toth proposes that twerking, rooted in African dance but as dance-form originating in the New Orleans projects, should be understood as 'urban terrorism that forces people to witness the ways in which women reclaim public spaces through the motion of their bodies' (2017: 293). Also, twerking emphasizes large butts, and thereby challenges Western beauty standards and the relationship between fit, strong bodies and capitalist/imperialist exploitation.

Does Toth's interpretation make sense in the classroom on Sint Maarten? At first glance Daisy and Dane seem to merely imitate the moves and songs they encounter on television. However, why do they choose to work/twerk then and there? In Stuart Hall's terms, twerking is a form of popular culture that challenges the powers that be: their teacher. He forces the pupils to do maths. This is not only a subject that most pupils find no joy in, most of them also do not have any use for being able to measure and name angles. So instead of doing work, they twerk. Or maybe the twerking is the real work. Because with their dance, they ask me, and those in charge of the curriculum, to review the lessons pupils are taught and the ways in which this is done. Is education a factory in which passive laborers are produced? Or can education help youngsters become the critical and creative citizens that Sint Maarten and the world need so badly.

Version Arubano di Parang: un perspectiva cercano cu e conexion Ingles y Spaño Caribense

E legendario cantante Arubano di Calypso Young Spitfire, cual nomber berdadero ta Brian Anthony Stokes, recientemente a compone y lansa e Parang Soca yama "Aruba Parang Song". E reconocido productor di Soca, Trevor Cassell (sobrino di King Arrow) a aregla e cantica aki.

Brian Stokes giving explanation in Village SXM straat

E cancion aki ta duna un synopsis di e tradicion di Pasco na Aruba, specialmente e habitantenan di habla Ingles na San Nicolas. E ta describi e proceso di proceso di preparacion pa despues pasa bishita famia y amigonan (cu bebita y cuminda) durante e temporada di Pasco. Aunke den pasado, varios musico Arubano a produci musica den e genero di Parang of di Parang Soca, te ainda e ta algo masha peculiar. Algun cu a yega di haci'e den pasado tabata Mighty Whitemy, Valentino King, The Failures Band, Robert Maduro y defunto Mighty Breaka cu Impak Band. Te awe, e cantica di e genero di Parang Soca ta e clasico "I want ah piece of Pork". Parang y Parang Soca ta un genero musical tipicamente haya riba e isla di Trinidad. Moodie-Kublalsingh (1994) ta describi Parang:

... e interpretacion actual Trinitario di e palabra Spaño, parranda. Parranda ta e accion di sali bay bishita y e ta referi tambe na e carousel di amigonan cu ta pasa bay duna serenata na nan amigonan durante e año. E palabra parranda generalmente ta wordo uza den e expresionnan di andar de parranda, cual kiermen den e Trinidad moderno ta di bay paranging, cual no kiermen solamente keiro rond den e sentido original, pero tambe pasa un bon tempo cu of sin musica, bayendo di un luga pa otro, sin limite den mente (Moodie-Kublalsingh 1994, 65-66).

Pero e Parang y Parang Soca ta hopi similar cu e version Arubiano di Gaita y otro musicana di fin di año, cual tin su raiznan na Venezuela y demas paisnan den Latinoamerica. Aruba, mescos cu Trinidad ta situa cerca di e costa di Venezuela, caminda cu door di migration, mezcla di lenguaje, cuminda, musica y religion ta un practica comun. De hecho, esaki ta algo cu comun den henter Caribe. Un bon ehempel ta e Grupo di Betico, caminda por sitni e influencia di soca y calypso, bailando arriba e ritmo di "hisa man laira y bula, bula". Aunke cu e idioma ta diferente, y diferente terminonan ta wordo uza pa describi nos musica, tin un solo raiz cu ta uni nos tur. Algun referencia di Young Spitfire

- Young Spitfire ta e cantante di calypso mas jong cu a yega di competi den e calypso festival den e periodo cu tabata tin solamente Calypso contest pa adulto y no pa mucha
- El a bandona Aruba pa bay studia na Merca na 1982
- El a obtene su doctorado den educacion superior na 2017 for di Universidad di Miami
- Actualmente e ta Senior Director, Campus Administration na Miami Dade College na Miami

Young Spitfire and the Aruba Parang Song: a closer perspective on the English, Spanish Caribbean connection

Long-time Aruban calypsonian Young Spitfire, birth name Brian Anthony Stokes, has just composed and released a Parang-Soca entitled "Aruba Parang Song." Well known Soca-Master Producer, Trevor Cassell (King Arrow's nephew), has arranged this tune.

Brian Stokes giving explanation in Village SXM straat

Spitfire's song gives a synopsis of Christmas traditions in Aruba, particularly by English speaking Arubans in the district of San Nicolas. It describes the process of merry-making while visiting friends and family (with food and drink) during the Christmas season. Even though Aruban musicians in the past have produced music in the genre of Parang or its offspring Parang-Soca, it is still quite rare. Some who have done so in the past include Mighty Whitey, Valentino King, The Failures Band, Robert Maduro and the late Mighty Breaka with the Impak Band. To date, the most popular Parang tune on the island of Aruba is Scrunter's classic "I want ah piece of Pork". Parang and Parang-Soca is a musical genre typically found on the island of Trinidad and Tobago. Moodie-Kublalsingh (1994) describes Parang as,

... the present Trinidadian interpretation of the Spanish word, parranda. Parranda is the action of merrymaking and also refers to the group of carousers who serenade their friends throughout the year. The word parranda in general Spanish is used mainly in the expression andar de parranda, which in the modern Trinidadian vernacular is 'to go paranging,' akin to the Venezuelan parrandear, meaning not only merrymaking in the original sense, but also 'liming' or enjoying oneself, with or without music, moving from place to place with no time limit in mind.

"(Moodie-Kublalsingh 1994, 65-66).

Upon further observation however, we see that Parang and Parang-Soca are very much similar to the Aruban version of Gaita and other year-end sounds which have their roots in Venezuela and the rest of the Spanish Caribbean. Aruba, as Trinidad is located right off the coast of Venezuela where through migration, cross cultural mixing of language, food, music and religion is common practice. In fact, this is the case all throughout the Caribbean basin. A good example in Aruba are the specific Calypso influenced sounds in the traditional music of legendary Aruban band Grupo di Betico; one could easily chip and breakaway to the beat; "hisa man laira y bula, bula". Even though different languages are spoken across the region and different terms are used to describe our music, there is a common root that ties us all together.

A few facts about Young Spitfire

- Young Spitfire is the youngest calypsonians to ever compete in the main calypso festival during the period when there were only adult competitions and no children festival.
- He left Aruba to the United States in 1982 for further study
- Dr. Stokes earned his Ed.D. in Higher Education Leadership and Development in 2017 from the University of Miami
- He is currently the Senior Director, Campus administration at Miami Dade College in Miami, Florida
- He is the nephew of Aruba's Late Great Calypso Legend, David Randolph Hodge – known on the world calypso and soca stage as Young Quick Silver

VI Caribbean Culture 2018: Innovating Perspectives Beyond Colonial History and Cultural Narratives

The opening of the New Year 2018 marks the continuation of several powerful Caribbean-enriched educational initiatives, creative programs and innovative perspectives linked to cultural heritage, restorative social justice and public history narratives. In the Virgin Islands of the United States (VI-US), a former colony of Denmark known as the "Danish West Indies" (pre-1917), "the quest for self-determination, social empowerment and human rights are in alignment with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (1948); UN Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Res.1514/1541:1960; Res. 1654:1961); the UN-designated International Decade for People of African Descent (IDPAD 2015-2024) with the decade-long theme of "Recognition, Justice and Development"; among other regional and international historic observances, commemorations and celebrations.

There are reinterpretations and respectful reassessments regarding cultural heritage innovations on institutional invisibility, generational acceptance and intentional neglect of self-determined social governance in the VI-US that have oftentimes permitted inaccurate references to the region as the "Danish-Caribbean" or "Danish-American-Caribbean" in contrast to embracing a more liberating reference as the "Virgin Islands Caribbean" or "Virgin Islands Caribbean Americas." VI Emancipation manifested economically after centuries of Afrakan enslavement and European colonialism in 1848 with labor uprisings remaining consistent through the transfer from Denmark and purchase by the United States formalized on March 31, 1917.

"Emancipation is a process still going on. It appears that instead of us becoming emancipated we are becoming more entangled in the entrapments of our former enslavement masters. Hence, emancipation hasn't genuinely occurred. The enslaved will always be a servant in the master's best house living in the enslavement quarters at the whims and wishes of the masters. Until, those who are enslaved free themselves from the masters' clutches and shackles and build their own houses and homes—on their own ancestral lands—they will not become the masters and mistresses of their own houses, destiny and fate. A child doesn't stay in its' mother's womb after its natural completion of the nine-month journey within it's' mother... Emancipation is a birth and natural liberation into a free and new life!" (Herishe Tapaheru: 2005)

Educational programming and cultural heritage studies research are establishing and implementation efforts for more accurate historical and contemporary references to the VI-US are part of the framework of self-determination, reparatory justice, liberating social justice and restoration of our shared humanity. The TransAtlantic Slave Trade Danish Education Project has "increased discourse, exchanges and the archival documentation of public histories inclusive of themes linked to accurate accounts of enslavement narratives, reparative justice, human rights, self-determination and related affairs of 'Breaking the Silence' on reconciliation, restitution, and reparations to heal wrongs experienced by people of AfRaKan descent". There are a multiplicity of transcultural educational exchanges among youth, scholars and community stakeholders within the VI-US, Denmark, the Americas and beyond that are unveiling centuries of ignorance and a new revolution positively affecting our shared humanity.

GRADUATE STUDENT CORNER

Keisha Wiel

Now that the holidays are over and many of us have to get back to work (if we actually chose to give ourselves a break), I know that if you are like me, getting back into the swing of things can be a feat unto itself. Procrastination has been my biggest vice, which can be a real hassle even when you are trying to do the most mundane tasks. For instance, I have been trying to write this submission for a couple of days yet my procrastination has allowed me to focus on working out, cleaning, paying bills, spending time with family, etc. Basically, I have become very productive on tasks that are not important or due at that this particular moment. It is kind of like my undergrad days where I would stare at my computer for hours trying to think of what to write. And instead of writing, I would get everything else that I needed to do done. Only now, I don't have nearly as much energy to procrastinate and get the things that I need to get done.

Since getting back into work mode can be hassle, trying to figure out how to do it effectively can be a lifesaver. Creating a physical list of the things that need to get done (another way that you can procrastinate effectively!) can be a helpful tool. Maybe even take it step further and create a calendar (virtual or in print, whatever tickles your fancy) with exact due dates. Although most due dates for grant applications have already passed, there are plenty of other deadlines that are coming up. There are conferences (including the CSA), papers for those conferences, and grants that are just waiting for you to apply. And of course, there is your own work for your program that needs attention. I'm sure many of us who are either preparing for candidacy or trying to get that dissertation chapter done, having some sort of structure is necessary for our success. And for those of us who are just beginning our graduate program journey, creating a list of papers and tasks that need to be done can also be beneficial. It's never too early to start.

Now that the deadline for the CSA has been moved to give us a little more time, getting those panels and individual submissions by the new date is all dependent on how you are managing your time. Also, if you are still unsure about whether you want to join a constituted panel, try reaching out to fellow graduate students. The Facebook group is a great start if you don't know other graduate students in your field. Since it is a closed group, just send me an email (gradstudentrep@caribbeanstudiesassociation.org) and I will add you. If you are already a member of the group, invite your fellow grad students so that we can continue to grow. Good luck with your abstract submissions and other personal due dates. See you all in Havana!

Ahora que las vacaciones han terminado y muchos de nosotros tenemos que volver al trabajo (si realmente decidimos darnos un descanso), sé que si eres como yo, volver al ritmo de las cosas puede ser una hazaña en sí misma. La procrastinación ha sido mi mayor vicio, que puede ser una verdadera molestia, incluso cuando estás tratando de hacer las tareas más mundanas. Por ejemplo, he estado tratando de escribir esta presentación por un par de días, sin embargo, mi postergación me ha permitido concentrarme en entrenar, limpiar, pagar facturas, pasar tiempo con la familia, etc. Básicamente, me he vuelto muy productivo en tareas que no son importantes o debidos en ese momento particular. Es como mis días de estudiante cuando miraba mi computadora por horas tratando de pensar qué escribir. Y en lugar de escribir, obtendría todo lo demás que tenía que hacer. Solo ahora, no tengo tanta energía para posponer las cosas que necesito hacer.

Ya que volver al modo de trabajo puede ser una molestia, tratar de descubrir cómo hacerlo de manera efectiva puede ser un salvavidas. ¡Crear una lista física de las cosas que se deben hacer (otra manera de posponer las cosas de manera efectiva!) Puede ser una herramienta útil. Tal vez incluso dar un paso más y crear un calendario (virtual o impreso, lo que sea que le guste) con fechas de vencimiento exactas. Aunque la mayoría de las fechas de vencimiento para las solicitudes de subvención ya han pasado, hay muchos otros plazos que se aproximan. Hay conferencias (incluida la CSA), documentos para esas conferencias y subvenciones que solo están esperando que se postule. Y, por supuesto, hay su propio trabajo para su programa que necesita atención. Estoy seguro de que muchos de nosotros que nos estamos preparando para la candidatura o que intentamos hacer ese capítulo de tesis, tener algún tipo de estructura es necesario para nuestro éxito. Y para aquellos de nosotros que estamos empezando nuestro viaje de programa de posgrado, crear una lista de documentos y tareas que deben hacerse también puede ser beneficioso. Nunca es demasiado temprano para comenzar.

Ahora que la fecha límite para la CSA se ha cambiado para darnos un poco más de tiempo, obtener esos paneles y las presentaciones individuales para la nueva fecha depende de cómo administre su tiempo. Además, si aún no está seguro de si desea unirse a un panel constituido, trate de comunicarse con otros estudiantes graduados. El grupo de Facebook es un gran comienzo si no conoces a otros estudiantes de posgrado en tu campo. Como es un grupo cerrado, solo envíeme un correo electrónico (gradstudentrep@caribbeanstudiesassociation.org) y lo agregaré. Si ya es miembro del grupo, invite a sus compañeros estudiantes de posgrado para que podamos seguir creciendo. Buena suerte con sus envíos de resúmenes y otras fechas de vencimiento personales. ¡Los veo a todos en La Habana!

Maintenant que les vacances sont terminées et que beaucoup d'entre nous doivent retourner au travail (si nous choisissons de nous accorder une pause), je sais que si vous êtes comme moi, retourner dans le balancement des choses peut être un exploit en soi . La procrastination a été mon plus grand vice, ce qui peut être un vrai problème, même lorsque vous essayez de faire les tâches les plus banales. Par exemple, j'ai essayé d'écrire cette soumission pendant quelques jours, mais ma procrastination m'a permis de me concentrer sur le travail, le nettoyage, le paiement des factures, passer du temps en famille, etc. En gros, je suis devenu très productif ne sont pas importants ou dus à ce moment particulier. C'est un peu comme mes premiers jours où je regardais mon ordinateur pendant des heures en essayant de penser à quoi écrire. Et au lieu d'écrire, j'obtiendrais tout ce que j'avais besoin de faire. Seulement maintenant, je n'ai pas autant d'énergie à remettre à plus tard et obtenir les choses dont j'ai besoin pour faire.

Depuis le retour en mode de travail peut être un problème, essayer de comprendre comment le faire efficacement peut être une bouée de sauvetage. Créer une liste physique des choses qui doivent être faites (une autre façon que vous pouvez remettre à plus tard!) Peut être un outil utile. Peut-être même aller plus loin et créer un calendrier (virtuel ou imprimé, tout ce qui vous plaît) avec les dates exactes. Bien que la plupart des dates d'échéance pour les demandes de subvention aient déjà été dépassées, il y a beaucoup d'autres échéances à venir. Il y a des conférences (y compris l'ASC), des documents pour ces conférences et des subventions qui ne demandent qu'à être appliquées. Et bien sûr, il y a votre propre travail pour votre programme qui a besoin d'attention. Je suis sûr que beaucoup d'entre nous qui préparent la candidature ou qui essaient de faire ce chapitre de thèse, qui ont une sorte de structure, sont nécessaires à notre succès. Et pour ceux d'entre nous qui commencent à peine notre programme d'études supérieures, la création d'une liste d'articles et de tâches à effectuer peut également être bénéfique. Il n'est jamais trop tôt pour commencer.

Maintenant que la date limite pour l'ASC a été déplacée pour nous donner un peu plus de temps, l'obtention de ces panneaux et des soumissions individuelles avant la nouvelle date dépend de la façon dont vous gérez votre temps. De plus, si vous ne savez toujours pas si vous voulez vous joindre à un groupe constitué, essayez d'établir le contact avec d'autres étudiants diplômés. Le groupe Facebook est un bon début si vous ne connaissez pas d'autres étudiants diplômés dans votre domaine. Comme il s'agit d'un groupe fermé, envoyez-moi un courriel (gradstudentrep@caribbeanstudiesassociation.org) et je vous ajouterai. Si vous êtes déjà membre du groupe, invitez vos camarades diplômés afin que nous puissions continuer à grandir. Bonne chance avec vos soumissions de résumés et autres dates d'échéance personnelles. On se voit tous à La Havane!

CARIBBEAN ARTISTIC SCHOLARSHIP

Shanice Gonzales

Shanice was born in 1991 in Port-of-Spain, Trinidad & Tobago. Her mixed-media pieces centre around deconstructing and examining violence, objectification and commodification. Her entire academic life, thus far, has been served at the University of the West Indies.

Shanice first completed certificate qualifications in Social Work and Psychology at the University of the West Indies Open Campus. Shanice then went on to pursue her Bachelors in Fine Art at the UWI St Augustine.

Shanice's work has been on display at Alice Yard, Port-of-Spain; the National Museum of Trinidad and Tobago; Toronto Urban Film Festival; Fresh Milk Barbados; Caribbean Linked IV in Aruba; and the Los Angeles Contemporary Exhibitions, to name a few.

Artist Statement

Shanice's work explores gender-based issues. She uses "deceptively soft and light pieces" to deconstruct violence faced by women and children in our societies with a focus on the objectification and commodification of women's bodies, and the role of the media in this process. Through visual re-presentations, Shanice creates awareness by exploring the 'why' factor and probing "the things that are hardest to talk about, but in a delicate, and beautiful way." Her artistic inspiration comes from her own journey of self-discovery—a confrontation of self. And more importantly, from her mother's battle with her own past and the traumas of that past. The stories of Shanice's mother not only serve as inspiration and motivation for the current work, but also bring about the transformation of silence into a language of action.

CARIBBEAN COMMUNITY GAME CHANGERS

Safiya Olugbala

"Professor Ivan Van Sertima says that European expansion into the broader world and European colonization of history, have locked us into a "five hundred year room" of history". A constricting space, that has sought to erase the contributions of Afrikan people to world history. Safiya Olugbala was always conscious of the remarkable role of education and its ability to create an evolved reality that could extract an oppressed people from that room. Born to a black militant father and a resourceful Alkebulan queen in the backwoods of South Trinidad, Safiya's classroom was constructed out of a nineteenth century progressive model. Her parents, particularly her father, surrounded her with some of the finest minds since the imposed invisibility of Egypt and the Nile Valley Civilization. Books and stories were her teachers and the wellspring of knowledge they provided led to grand imaginings that haunted her childhood and directed her path into adulthood.

The acquisition of knowledge and understanding is the most powerful form of revolution. It is the most unconquerable act of resistance that can bring to heel the most formidable attack of an enemy. This inescapable truth never surrendered its prominence in her mind. Her father taught young, Afrikan youth to read by the illumination of street lamps. Her mother enrolled in evening classes to improve her status at her place of employment, only to withdraw when she recognized that there was an opportunity for Safiya and her sister to attend The University of the West Indies, St. Augustine. A student of the sciences in secondary school, Safiya was seduced by the notion that she could earn a degree doing what she loved most—reading! She pursued studies in Literatures of English and studied psychology and philosophy. She went on to study at the University of the Southern Caribbean where she read for a Master's degree in Educational Psychology.

The lessons of her childhood never failed to assert themselves and the urgent imperative of liberating Afrikan youth through education and self-awareness burned fiercely. A journey into the education system was inevitable. Her teaching profession began and ended at Sangre Grande Junior Secondary School. Disillusionment quickly set in and one day she simply refused to report for duty and never returned to the institution. The students fought losing battles against illiteracy, parents were uninvolved or absent, classrooms were uninspiring and lacked basic furnishings and equipment, the infusion of culture was met with forceful resistance and innovation was shot down with murderous intent. The staff, though overworked and overwhelmed, was committed. She co-founded Lalibela Holistic Institute which sought to address all of the ills of the public school system. Lalibela's ambition was to immerse students into nature and let her be their teacher while creating an alternative curriculum that infused Afrikan traditions and learning systems.

Her upcoming project, "The Black Code" puts the focus on STEM in education or rather STEAM, since there can be no real education without the Arts. "The Black Code" trains Afrikan youth in coding and robotics. The focus is on preparing the future to navigate the future. Safiya is also the Managing editor of a newspaper publication called, The Afrikan Caribbean Voice.

2018 CSA CONFERENCE CALL FOR PAPERS

43rd Annual Conference, Caribbean Studies Association (CSA)

Education, Culture and Emancipatory thought in the Caribbean

Havana, Cuba, 4th to 8th of June 2018

This annual conference proposes integrating education, culture, and emancipatory thought as the fundamental reflexive axes for furthering the process of decolonisation in the Caribbean. All three concepts deepen our understanding of the re-appropriation and recuperation of memory—be it individual, collective, social or historical—in these territories. Our conference aims to foster dialogue and brainstorm about these three topics in order to rethink and reconstruct paradigms, to relocate margins and excluded spaces, and to understand the diversity and complexity of this region's peoples.

Caribbean history was forged from many contributors and interferences due to the quantity and diversity of sources, as well as the fragmentary way this history has been told. Methods of recuperation and an analysis of this narrative process are essential in order to decolonize the mind, which poses a challenge to the field of education. In the Caribbean, culture and history are intensely vivid. In such a setting, the seeds of resistance and of emancipatory thought are crucial; this conference will look not only at the present but also to the future. [READ MORE]
